

PW Profiles

Ageless Architecture from Modern Technology

Throughout history, architectural embellishments have adorned homes and public structures the world over. In early times, quarried stone was the materials of choice, then intricately carved wood and plaster found their places in fine architecture along with the rich detailing of fired terra cotta. Today's building profiles, or lack thereof, are largely predicated upon economic and structural practices. Cut stone and other masterfully carved building details are still available, but few projects can justify their extensive impact upon budget and time.

Patterson Whittaker is an innovative company that has combined the richly sophisticated design principals of the past with today's latest technologies. No longer is it impractical to beautify projects with timeless classical detailing reminiscent of the cornices, parapets, and elegant door and window surrounds found in the finest European architecture. Their unique construction and attachment systems allow even the most dramatic, large-scale details to be economically applied to both interior and exterior wall surfaces.

It is their quest to provide well-constructed and beautifully designed architectural shapes that ensures your projects will be both elegant in appearance and meet today's highest technical standards.

PW products are lightweight, exceedingly durable, easy to install and available for shipments worldwide. Our shapes are suitable for both interior and exterior building applications and for any level of design and sophistication. They have an array of stone-like finished products virtually indistinguishable from those crafted from the finest quarried stones. Utilizing specialized manufacturing equipment, installation systems and specialty coating formulations allow them to offer a quality building detailing system unlike anything else on the market.

Locally manufactured in the Northwest since the late 1990s and designed to meet our harsh weather demands. The team at Patterson Whittaker look forward in supporting your architectural profile needs.

For more detailed information visit: pwprofiles.com ■

Originally inspired by European architectural masterpieces. We are proud of our ability to manufacture architecturally correct profiles that simulate real cut stone, while also providing custom and modern profiles to meet current design trends.

Karri Anderson – Sales Executive

Patterson Whittaker
ARCHITECTURAL PROFILES
pwprofiles.com